

Please understand before enrolling your child in SCYR programs:

One of the major goals of the Sangre de Cristo Youth Ranch (SCYR) is to provide for children a learning experience that promotes personal growth and self-confidence through the adventure and challenge of living in a ranch-farm and wilderness environment. Exploring the natural world and mastering new skills with due caution and concern for safety, are rewarding aspects of the child's experience, along with the enjoyment and self-esteem gained by her or his accomplishments.

It is important, however, for parent(s) to appreciate that even with the best of intentions, one cannot totally eliminate the possibility of accidental injury to those participating in SCYR activities such as: working with horses and farming equipment, ranch and farm projects, mountain hiking, camping, swimming in ponds and swift-water floats, general recreation, sports, and motor vehicle travel. Please be aware: the possibility of sickness, accidental injury, even death, is inherent in some activities included in Sangre de Cristo Youth Ranch programs. All risks, both known and unforeseen, must be weighed against the value of the SCYR experience to the child, and these risks must be willingly accepted by the parent(s) if they want their child to participate in SCYR programs.
